Background Information for Vets

When applied to animals, the therapy is regarded as a manipulative therapy covered by the Veterinary Surgery (Exemptions) Order 1962 of the 1966 Veterinary Surgeons Act, allowing qualified practitioners to work on the animal on referral from the dog's veterinarian.

Canine Bowen is a soft-tissue remedial therapy involving 'light-touch' moves of fingers or thumbs over muscle, ligament, tendon and/or fascia at specific points of the dog's body. The work is very subtle and involves no hard or prolonged pressure. It offers dogs a gentle, non-invasive and effective hands-on technique that aims to promote healing, pain-relief and rebalancing.

2/2

Canine Bowen aims to promote and support the body's own self-healing and as a result may be very useful for dogs with problems in the following areas :

- Acute injury e.g. sprains and strains.
- Chronic conditions and degenerative disease - helping to improve the dog's quality of life.
- Rescue/re-homed dogs - relaxation of tension caused by earlier stress and trauma.
- Pre- and post-operative surgery - assisting recovery times.
- Fear-based anxiety, such as fireworks and thunderstorms.

Common conditions often presented at Canine Bowen sessions include:

- Allergies and Skin conditions
- Arthritis and Muscular Sprains & Strains
- Back problems
- Lameness and other Gait problems
- Hip & Elbow Dysplasia
- Working or Competition dogs
- Dogs that pull on the lead
- Aggression and other behavioural problems
- Stress & Anxiety disorders
- Cystitis & Urinary disorders
- Recurrent Ear problems
- Sciatica
